Legion Post 433 Resolves to Trade-at-Home

Worthy of emulation by all our civic organizations, and citizens as well, is the resolution recently adopted as follows:

Resolution presented by Ocean Beach Post No. 433, American Legion, meeting of June 4, 1936.

Whereas, Ocean Beach post No. 433, American Legion, believes that its members are vitally interested in the progress and up-building of their community, and,

Whereas, it is believed that the local merchants and other business establishments offer to members of the post and auxiliary unit the necessities they desire at a fair price, and,

Whereas, since these business firms have been most kind and considerate to the post and its members, therefore,

Be it Resolved, that all members and their families patronize the local business places, shops and establishments whenever they are in need of anything for the home, automobile, or outings, and be it,

Further Resolved, that all members and their families be asked to do their shopping at home—Ocean Beach, our own community, and be it further,

Resolved, that a copy of this resolution be given to the Ocean Beach News, the various veterans papers, and down-town newspapers, and spread upon the minutes of this meeting.

Elmer E. Steele,
Vice Chairman, Resolution Committee.

Logan E. Ruggles, post commander.

Merchants Well Pleased With Band Reception

A surprisingly good turn-out greeted the Federal Music Project band at its first concert of the summer season in Ocean Beach last Saturday afternoon. The organization, under the direction of James B. Larkin rendered splendid music, which was well received, for more than an hour.

We are sure the people of Ocean Beach are going to appreciate this treat, made possible by courtesy of business people who donated for a band stand.

On the committee, appointed by the Chamber of Commerce president, Carl Schroder, and with Carl's assistance, these men: Nate Sommer, J. W. Dick, John McAlpine and C. Reynolds, quick work was made of soliciting more than $70 for construction of the stand; then another day, with the help of Messrs. James Oliver, Clark, Lewis, Ewing and G. N. Speer, the platform was ready for use.

Don Haislet of the San Diego Union accompanied the band here and presided as master of ceremonies. Fred Kraft made a short talk thanking the audience of people on foot and those seated in 85 autos for their interest and attendance. He talked in behalf of the merchants and business people of Ocean Beach. Ed Hastings, Chairman of the County Board of Supervisors, later, between selections, told of the supervisors first sponsoring the band in order to get it started and believed it had been a mighty good investment, for he said, one might exist in jail on bread and water, yet there was a difference between existing and living, and that we should enjoy some of the pleasures,such as music, along with our living. Mr. Hastings believed that we are entitled to more than just the material things in life, and gave us all a good bit of advice on living a fuller and more enjoyable existance.

Following is a list of those who donated to the band stand project:

115 Masons and Stars Picnic at Descanso

After several weeks of pleasurable anticipation, members of Point Loma Order Eastern Star and Masonic bodies journeyed to Rankin's "estate" at Descanso Sunday for a day of frolic and feasting.

The Star committee, Mesdames Laurah Rankin, Hazel Lathrop and Jeanne Zern, assisted by Wm. E. Nelson, Harold K. Rankin and Ralph Lathrop, did themselves proud in matter of preparation of the picnic dinner as well as in matter of entertainment. A liberal supply of boiled ham, with buns and coffee, were furnished by the fraternal organizations, with members bringing a dish of salad, cake or some other toothsome delicacy. Appetites were good but the food supply was more than sufficient.

One hundred fifteen or a few more local folks participated in the picnic and took part in the races, volley ball and mirth-making pie eating contest. Everyone enjoyed themselves to the fullest extent and we know are grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Rankin and the lodges for their hospitality.

Reed Says Local Bank To Fulfill Local Need

Rollin E. Reed, manager of the Ocean Beach branch of Bank of America, returned Monday from Los Angeles where he conferred with L. M. Giannini, president, and other executives, on the loan policy of the bank.

"Bank of America is making a concerted effort to fulfill the credit needs of the state," he said. "Our executives are aware of the loan needs of every community, and it is our purpose to meet those needs with sound credit expansion.

"President Giannini explained very clearly that it is the desire of the management to take care of the legitimate credit needs of individuals as well as business organizations.

"Our bank leads all banks of the nation in modernization loans under the FHA, program parallel this record.

"It is our plan to continue aggressively in the fields of lending money for buying and building homes, in the personal loan field, in financing the purchase of automobiles, in lending on warehouse receipts, and performing all credit functions for the benefit of the territory we serve.

"We feel that a sound credit policy, designed to aid in the advancement of this community and its residents, is the most effective public service that our bank can render. Ample funds are available with Bank of America, and it is our purpose to put them to work for constructive purposes."

Mr. and Mrs. Earl U. Homuth of 4580 Niagara Ave., left recently for Mt. Rainier National Park where Homuth will take up his summer's work in the service of the National Park system as a naturalist and lecturer. He is a science teacher of the San Diego High school and has his own moving picture equipment to illustrate his lectures in the park.

Two Beach Sections Building Rapidly

For the first four months of 1936 there have been under construction at Mission Beach 28 new building units, averaging $2200 each. During April, 11 single-family residences were started at a total cost of $22,930 and eight apartment units at a cost of $14,240, each relieving unemployment and stimulating the business of contributing industries.

The Mission Beach peninsula, comprising 62 suddividing acres, has 396 water frontages, including both ocean and bay, and with a population more than doubled during the past five years, according to postoffice census, present indications point to a shortage of desirable building sites.

Ocean Beach with its miles of paved streets, churches of every denomination, clubs, lodges, library and new school building, is one of the desirable locations for permanent living. This is being demonstrated more and more each month, as, since Jan. 1, 68 permits have been issued, each averaging $1735. During April, 12 single residences at a cost of $27,969 and two apartments, valued at $2200, were started. When one compares these figures, issued from the office of the city planning commission, with those of 1933 to 1935, inclusive, when Mission Beach had 42 new units at an average of $1770 showing a 7.27 percent gain, and Ocean Beach had 67 units at an average cost of $2100, with a 4.04 percent gain, the comparison is favorable.—Tribune.

In order for the chamber of commerce to benefit from your purchase of tickets they must be purchased at one of the stores or from the business people.

The high tides of the spring season still continue and have been washing quite regularly under the Woman's club building at foot of Newport avenue. Wednesday night the water was somewhat higher than usual and took considerable sand and support from underneath the sidewalk and street in front of Mac's restaurant. City workmen have been busy replacing the old supports.

Sudden Death of Speaker Byrns—Rome Hails Badoglio While London Cheers Haile Selassie—Rural Housewives of World Convene.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

DEATH, sudden and unexpected, came to Joseph Wellington Byrns, speaker of the house of representatives, and put an end to a notable career. The veteran Tennessee congressman suffered a heart attack, followed by a cerebral hemorrhage, and passed away within a few hours in his apartment in the Mayflower hotel, Washington. For 27 years Mr. Byrns had represented the "Hermitage district" of Tennessee in the house, and he was elected speaker when the Seventy-fourth congress convened in January, 1935. He was a master of parliamentary strategy and so fair-minded a presiding officer that all, even his political opponents, praised and admired him. Before becoming speaker he served long years on the appropriations committee, as member and chairman, and he also was leader of the Democratic majority and chairman of the Democratic congressional campaign committee.

J. W. Byrns

Grief for Mr. Byrns' death was general and sincere in Washington officialdom. "I am shocked beyond all imagination," said Representative Bertrand H. Snell of New York, the minority leader. "It is a terrible thing. It is an almost irreparable loss."

Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, the majority leader, after expressing his own sense of loss, added: "His work during the session has been very difficult and trying. He was a great speaker."

President Roosevelt in a statement from the White House expressed well the high esteem in which Mr. Byrns was held. Said he:

"Fearless, incorruptible, unselfish with a high sense of justice, wise in counsel, broad of vision, calm in adversity, and modest in victory, he served his state and the nation with fidelity, honor, and great usefulness. I personally mourn the passing of a steadfast friend of many years."

Impressive funeral services were held in the chamber of the house, the President, members of the cabinet and numerous diplomats being present in addition to all members of congress. The body was then taken to Nashville, Tenn., for burial, and Mr. Roosevelt accompanied the special congressional committee there.

The house elected William B. Bankhead of Alabama speaker for the remainder of the session.

The death of Speaker Byrns followed closely that of another well-known congressman, A. Piatt Andrew of Massachusetts, a Republican. He died of influenza at his home in Gloucester at the age of sixty-three. Mr. Andrew, who taught economics at Harvard more than thirty years ago, was director of the mint for a few months under President Taft and then was assistant secretary of the treasury. He was elected to congress in 1921, and supported much of President Roosevelt's early legislation.

MISS CLARA DUTTON NOYES, sixty-six, director of the American Red Cross nursing service, died in Washington a few minutes after she was stricken while driving to work in her car. Miss Noyes was assistant director of the American Red Cross nursing service during the World war. She also had been superintendent of nurses at the Bellevue and allied hospitals in New York.

Cyrus Hall McCormick, whose father developed the farm reaper and who himself helped organize the International Harvester company and was its president for 33 years, died at his home in Lake Forest, Ill., at the age of seventy-seven years. He was noted as a progressive business man, liberal with his employees and always interested actively in public welfare movements. He was rated as one of the wealthiest men in America and gave millions of dollars to educational and charitable organizations.

MARSHAL PIETRO BADOGLIO, conqueror of Ethiopia and now viceroy of that part of the reconstituted "Roman empire," returned to the Eternal City in triumph and was vociferously welcomed as a hero. Sixty thousand Romans welcomed him as he stepped from his train, and Premier Mussolini modestly waited in the background until they had shouted their greetings to the veteran warrior. Then Il Duce came forward and kissed the viceroy on both cheeks, and the high ranking Fascist military leaders paid homage. With the premier and the picked troops forming the escort of honor were the entire cabinet. Several days later a great military review was held.

Viceroy Badoglio

The other side of the picture was seen in London, where Haile Selassie, the deposed emperor of Ethiopia, arrived in tears and sadness, though he was given an ovation by the cheering thousands that had seldom been accorded to visitors to England. Many of the Londoners carried Ethiopian flags or scarlet banners reading "Welcome to the Emperor." With the white sympathizers were many African chiefs in native robes, Somalis, negroes, Hindus, Chinese, and colored people from all parts of the world.

There was an outburst of wild cheering when Selassie, bareheaded and wearing a long black cape, stepped from his private sleeping car and was greeted by many notables, including O. C. Harvey, private secretary of Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary. Harvey was the lone representative of the British government.

JUST as the "popular front" in France was taking over the government the country was distracted by strikes that spread rapidly to almost all industrial centers and involved all manner of trades. The workers demanded higher wages, a 40-hour week and a closed shop, and they went out by the hundred thousand though they knew they were causing great embarrassment to their own leaders. In many cases the strikers took possession of the closed plants.

In Spain the syndicalists tied up various industries by strikes that involved about 250,000 workers and that were marked by several murders and other outrages. Augusto Barcia, minister of state, said the government planned to outlaw the syndicalists if they persisted in disobeying orders from the ministries of labor and the interior.

J. H. THOMAS, until recently British colonial secretary, was found responsible by a special government tribunal for the leak in budget secrets which enabled some of his friends to profit largely through insurance against tax raises. Final disposition of the case was left to the house of commons. Thomas, once an engine wiper and later a powerful figure in organized labor and politics, termed the tribune's verdict "cruel." He said: "My own conscience is clear. I repeat what I previously stated upon oath: that I made no disclosures of budget secrets to anybody."

RURAL housewives from many countries began their third triennial conference in Washington with Mrs. Alfred Watt of Canada presiding. Their first meeting was held in 1930 in Vienna, and the second in Stockholm three years later. Secretaries Hull and Wallace and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President, extended greetings to the visitors, but beyond that there were no set speeches and little formality. Instead, the farm wives held "exchange of experience" sessions, viewed elaborate exhibits of rural needlework and crafts of organized countrywomen of the participating nations, and attended "open houses" held by all branches of the federal government in which countrywomen are particularly interested.

Mrs. Alfred Watt

In exchanging experiences the women learned, among other things, that:

English groups have stimulated a remunerative revival of quilting to supplement the family income.

Australian countrywomen maintain seaside homes for convalescents. Canada's Federated Women's institute promotes clubs for rural youth and combats maternal and infant mortality.

By conducting evening classes for young girls Danish countrywomen have helped to check their migration to town to seek factory work.

IN A report just made public the business advisory council proposes a simplified basis for industrial self-regulation through the medium of voluntary joint agreements on unfair trade practices enforceable by the federal trade commission. The report was prepared by the council's committee on unfair trade practices of which Lincoln Filene of Boston is chairman.

Outstanding among the committee's proposals were suggestions that each branch of an industry, such as wholesale, retail, and manufacturing, police the activities of each other through confidential reports to the federal trade commission and that no attempt be made to include trade practice and labor provisions in the same agreements.

THE so-called industrial mobilization plan of the War department, providing for a military dictatorship over labor, capital and industry, as well as censorship of the press in wartime, was severely condemned in a report to the senate by the munitions committee.

THE senate by a vote of 62 to 14 passed the deficiency bill carrying $2,375,000,000, of which sum $1,425,000,000 is handed to the President to spend as he pleases for "relief and work relief." As passed by the house, the measure turned the entire amount of relief money over to WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins.

Three Democratic senators voted against the bill—Tydings of Maryland, Bulkley of Ohio and Byrd of Virginia.

By a senate amendment, the bill authorizes the President to order a restudy of reports on the $200,000,000 Florida ship canal and allocate another $10,000,000 to carry on work upon it during the coming fiscal year.

Efforts to do anything for the Passamaquoddy tidal project in Maine had proved unavailing.

NEW YORK state's law providing minimum wages for women and minors was declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme court on the ground that it conflicts with the fourteenth amendment by violating freedom of contract. The decision, written by Justice Butler, was concurred in by Justices Van Devanter, McReynolds, Sutherland and Roberts. Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Stone, Brandeis and Cardozo dissented. A number of other states have statutes similar to the one thus held invalid.

CATHOLICS the world over celebrated the seventy-ninth birthday of Pope Pius XI, and the pontiff himself marked the day by attending a solemn mass in St. Peter's in the presence of 40,000 pilgrims who went to Rome especially for the occasion. These were mainly members of the Catholic Action organization which Pius XI founded, and to them he spoke for nearly an hour. He denounced communism, as he has done on other occasions, and declared the Catholic press was one of the best forces in combating the communists.

Pope Pius XI

It was evident to all observers the pope's age is beginning to tell on him and that he found the long ceremony very much of a strain.

NINE of the richest unions in the American Federation of Labor, having more than a million members, probably will be suspended soon by the federation's executive council, and at the next convention they will be expelled if the council can command the necessary two-thirds majority. Thus will come to a crisis the internecine contest between the craft unionists led by President William Green and the industrial unionists who follow John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers.

Green wants to continue to organize industry by skilled groups while Lewis would seek to unite all workers, skilled and unskilled, by industries into one big union.

The craft unionists, it was learned, intend to suspend the charters of the nine industrial unions at the July executive council session, a power granted the council under the A. F. of L. constitution.

Lewis' group of unions includes 400,000 miners, Sidney Hillman's Amalgamated Clothing Workers, David Dubinsky's International Ladies' Garment union, the oil workers, typographers, flat glass workers, hat, cap, and millinery workers, mine, mill, and smelter workers, and textile workers.

THERE was every reason to believe that Japan had found, or manufactured, excuses for further encroachments in northern China, and that serious conflict between the two nations would ensue unless China were submissive. The Japanese alleged that a bridge on the railway line between Tangku and Tientsin was destroyed and that there was an attempt to wreck a troop train. The highest Japanese officers in North China were summoned to a conference in Tientsin.

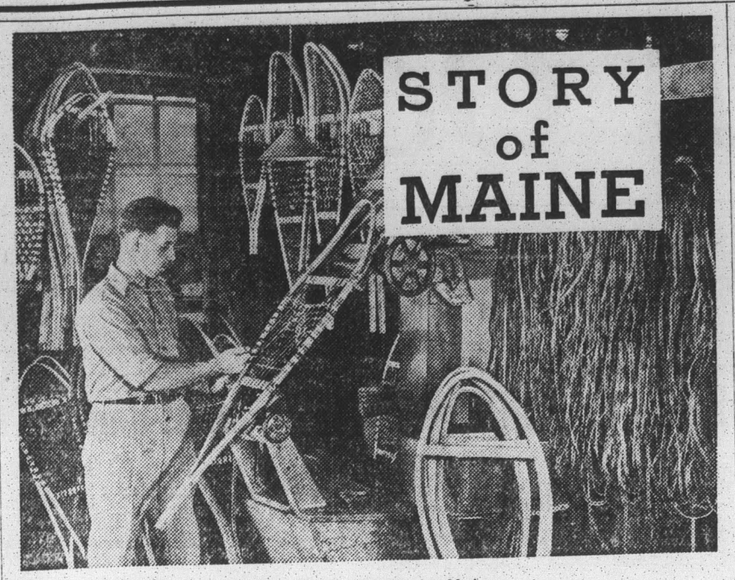
Yakichiro Suma, Japanese consul general in Nanking, declared publicly that China must choose either "mutual interdependence with Japan or war with Japan," and he said he had informed Generalissimo Kai-shek, Chinese dictator, of this viewpoint. "Japan has gone too far to retreat now and must advance straight ahead with immutable convictions," Suma said.

The Japanese military command, meanwhile, disclosed frankly some of their demands upon China. These included:

1. Privilege of building railroads, military and civilian air bases and army barracks.
2. Establishment of regular air service between China and Japan.
3. An economic, political and military position for Japan in China.

STEWART McDONALD, federal housing administrator, outlined to newspaper men a new program which provides for the construction of "garden homes" outside of large cities that will aid in the gradual movement of industrial workers from urban and suburban areas to small plots several miles out in the country. He said President Roosevelt was enthusiastic over the plan.

Emphasizing that "this is not anything in the way of a benevolent proposition" and that no grants of federal funds were involved, Mr. McDonald said it would be accomplished through a broadening of FHA regulations to permit government insurance of mortgages on such property. This will enable bankers and other leaders to advance funds for the development of these "in between" areas for residential purposes.



Making Snow Shoes in Maine.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

WITH warmer weather gripping the southland, vacationists feel the appeal of northern climes. Each section of the country has its cool spot. Many easterners are lured to Maine, which is noted not only for its invigorating summer climate but also for its historic background.

The name of Maine may or may not be French; it certainly is not Indian, like Massachusetts or Connecticut. Of the sixteen counties, five recall the mother country, being named for English shires; five others honor American personages of the colonial or Revolutionary periods, and the remaining six retain the Indian names of the rivers within their borders.

As for the other names which have received specific legislative sanction for something over 400 cities, towns, and townships, the larger part are simply descriptive, or repetitions of towns in other New England states. Of the rest, so far as the origin of their names is known, 66 bear Old world names, so that in that delightful tale by Laura E. Richards, "Narcissa, or the Road to Rome," the roadside signpost might have pointed to Vienna, Belgrade, or even China, and kept within the jurisdiction of the County of Kennebec.

Proprietors and first settlers are known to have given their names to 58 towns; governors, generals, and Presidents to 16, 12, and 6 towns, respectively; while Indian names, which so plainly tell their own origin, number only 23.

An interesting touch of idealism was the selection of such distinctive town names as Harmony, Amity, and Hope; Freedom, Liberty, and Unity, these last three being neighbors in Waldo county.

From the beginning the economic life of Maine was founded on fish, fur, and forest. These three furnished powerful incentives for exploration and the chief rewards for settlement.

The fisheries of the Gulf of Maine were even an issue between king and parliament early in the Seventeenth century, when the English fishermen won their fight for free fishing along the Maine coast, despite the monopoly granted by James I in his patent to the council of New England.

Fisheries a Major Industry.

So it came that the earliest sites of permanent settlements were chosen not for mildness of climate, but by reason of proximity to the cold waters where dwelt the fish that could be converted into a profitable export, without license fee being paid to any patentees of the crown.

The fisheries continue a major industry. The value of the state's fishing products as marketed approximates six million dollars, the two largest items being the plebeian herring and the aristocratic lobster.

Along with the ancient business of fishing a place must be given to the popular sport of angling, for which Maine offers unsurpassed inducements, in the lakes and streams and also offshore.

Last year 35,000 fishermen and fisherwomen from outside the state, and nearly five times that number of residents, obtained licenses. The fees received went directly to hatching, planting and protecting a new crop of game fish.

The state maintains 36 fish hatcheries and rearing stations, and from these last year went 17,000,000 trout, togue, and salmon for stocking the brooks, streams, and lakes. Nearly half of these "planted" fish were above legal size, and 10,000 weighed from 3 to 6 pounds each.

The policy of protecting wild life is enforced by a corps of 100 game wardens, who seek to be big brothers to the youth of the state in training them to be good sportsmen. In the severe winter of 1934, airplanes were used to locate deer yards and then cedar trees were cut to feed the starving deer confined there by the deep snow.

Moose are far from being extinct. They can be shot only with a camera; but deer continue plentiful, 18,933 having been killed legally in 1933. More bears are killed in Maine than in any three other states. Grouse, woodcock, and ducks complete the game offering, with pheasants promised as a future attraction.

The Early Explorers.

As early as 1605 Capt. George Waymouth and his companions on the Archangel—many of them world travelers for that day—were deeply stirred by their first views of a Maine river which the captain named St. George's (now St. George).

An exploratory trip inland "toward the great mountains," the Camden hills, convinced them of the "beauty and goodness" of the land, as recorded by Rosier in his True Relation of that "most prosperous voyage." And the author boldly affirmed St. George's "to be the most rich, beautiful, large and secure harboring river that the world affordeth."

A few years later (1614), Capt. John Smith was less attracted by this eastern part of the region he named New England. Yet he saw fit to say of this coast, "Those barren Iles so furnished with good woods, springs, fruits, fish and foule, that it makes me think though the coast be rocky, and thus affrightable, the valleys, plains and interior parts may well (notwithstanding) be very fertile."

So moderate a statement must have been exceeded by other testimony of that day, since only a dozen years later another explorer on the Maine coast, Capt. Christopher Levett, a member of the Council of New England, felt it necessary to "debunk" certain other travelogues, not preserved for the modern reader. In reporting on his voyage of 1623-4, he remarks: "Nor will the Deare come when they are called, or stand still and looke on a man, until he shute him, not knowing a man from a beast, nor the fish leape into the kettle."

And he continues: "But certainly there is fowle, Deare, and Fish enough for the taking if men be diligent," which equally well describes the Maine of 1623 and 1935.

The discovery of this part of the North Atlantic shore is usually credited to John Cabot of Bristol, on his second voyage in 1498.

The honor of making the first detailed contributions to accurate geographic knowledge of Maine must, however, be shared by a Frenchman and an Englishman: Samuel de Champlain and the aforementioned Captain Waymouth.

In 1605 both Champlain and Waymouth were sailing along the Maine coast. So near did they come to meeting that in midsummer Champlain heard from an Indian chief on the Kennebec of the presence of an English ship ten leagues to the eastward, which was undoubtedly Captain Waymouth's Archangel.

The race was on between the French and the English; and the Maine region was destined to be eventful borderland for a century and a half in the contest for control between New England and New France.

Settled by Sieur de Monts.

The first settlement in Maine was made by Sieur de Monts, who in 1603 had obtained from the king of France a trading concession for Acadia, then defined as extending from Cape Breton island to the latitude of Philadelphia. With Chaplain as his lieutenant, De Monts set sail for the New world fully equipped for his colonization venture.

Some three months later, on June 26, 1604, a small island in a sheltered river was selected as best adapted for a fortified settlement and trading post. This island was named Saint Croix and was not far above where the river now bearing the same name empties into Passamaquoddy bay. Here, on what is now also known as Dochet island, was erected a group of dwellings in part built of timber brought from France, with a storehouse, dining hall, kitchen, and blacksmith shop. Gardens were laid out, all carefully planned by Champlain.

The site of this earliest but short-lived settlement in Maine, which antedated Jamestown, Quebec, and Plymouth, was not wholly obliterated.

Before the Pilgrims.

In a speech in congress 100 years after statehood was granted to Maine, Representative Robert Luce of Massachusetts, himself Maine born, remarked that Maine might more fittingly be called the older sister of Massachusetts than her daughter. And the records of early settlement and trade well bear out this contention.

On Capt. John Smith's map of New England of 1614, for example, the site which is now York was named Boston, thus locating in Maine, so far as maps go, the first New World Boston—and all this before the Pilgrims even landed!

When the Pilgrims set foot on Plymouth Rock, not a few Englishmen had already been sojourning on the Maine coast and even had wintered there. The welcome of the Indian sachem Samoset was in the Pilgrims' own tongue, learned from the fishermen on the Maine coast. Indeed, thirteen years before, in 1607, the Popham colonists built a fort in "that northern colony" which mounted 12 pieces of ordnance. They also erected a church and launched a 30-ton vessel—a fine record of English piety and preparedness.

TALL TALES

California, Here I Come

SOMEONE besides the movie press ought to get busy and sing the praises of California. For California always does things on the grand scale.

A couple of visitors from Connecticut went out there one summer. One of them was so overawed by the size of California mountains that he turned back home, but the other remained.

This fellow stayed one night at the house of a native Californian. He confessed, at breakfast, he liked an egg and he liked it soft boiled. What did they do but wheel in an egg the size of a flour barrel, place it beside the lady of the house and chisel into it with a billiard cue.

When questioned, the host confessed that the egg wasn't the work of a single hen but had been laid co-operatively by his entire flock.

After breakfast the visitor left. He reached a river before noon and was ferried across by a strange-appearing craft.

"Is this business a paying one?" he asked the ferryman.

"Hardly enough to pay for raising the boat, stranger," was the reply. "This boat was grown as a pumpkin, mister. Cut from a pumpkin shell, raised in that patch over thar."

"Over by that barn?" asked the visitor from Connecticut.

"Barn?" replied the native. "Say, that was a pumpkin, too. But I blasted a hole in it and now I let the stock inside whenever there's wet weather ahead."

Dog Tale

THE year Paul Bunyan established his lumber camp on the Big Onion river he had a great deal of trouble with rats and mice. They ate up the scraps of buffalo milk pancakes that Big Joe, his camp cook, made and grew to be as big as two-year-old bears.

So Paul sent over to Michigan and got a pup that was part wolf and part elephant hound and began feeding him on bear milk. In a little while this pup, whom Paul named Sport, was big enough to clean up all the rats and mice around the camp, so Paul decided to send him after bigger game. He trained Sport to become a moose terrier and all Big Joe had to say was "Sport, go out and get me a mess of moose," and Sport would do it.

One night Sport was playing around the horse barn when Paul mistook him for a mouse. Quick as a flash he hurled an ax at the animal and to his horror found that he had cut Sport in two. Quickly realizing his mistake, Paul picked up the two halves, stuck them together, gave the dog first aid and bandaged him up with strips torn from 87 horse blankets.

The next morning Paul discovered that in his haste he had twisted Sport's two halves so that the hind legs pointed straight up. But this proved to be an advantage after all, for the dog learned to run on two legs a while, then flop over without loss of speed and run on the other two.

Sport was a good trailer, too. Once when he was out in the woods with Paul they discovered the skeleton of a moose that had died of old age. Just out of curiosity Paul picked up the back tracks of the moose and showed them to Sport. So the dog started back over the moose's trail, and before sunset he had led Paul clear back to the place where the moose was born.

The Grateful Rattlesnake

C. M. TATHAM, editor of the Sabine County Reporter at Hemphill, Texas, doesn't agree with most people that the rattlesnake is always cold-hearted. That's because of an experience of a farmer in his community.

This farmer found a rattlesnake caught in a steel-trap. Taking pity on the snake, he released it and it quickly slid away in the chaparral.

But imagine his surprise, upon returning home, to find that the rattlesnake had followed him. The reptile acted so friendly that the farmer didn't have the heart to drive it away and it soon became one of his favorite pets.

That winter the farmer moved from his ranch into town. The snake again followed him and made its home under the house. One cold night it coiled up on the doorstep and looked so pathetic that the farmer allowed it to sleep under the stove in the kitchen.

The next morning the farmer heard a commotion downstairs. Rushing into the kitchen he saw a strange sight. A burglar was trying desperately to release himself from the grip of the snake which was coiled tightly around his neck with its tail stuck out the opened window and rattling frantically. A moment later a squad of police burst into the kitchen door. They had heard the snake's burglar alarm and had come to capture the culprit and lead him away to jail.

The Rings of Saturn

The rings of Saturn spin around the planet rapidly. It is believed that they consist of a swarm of separate particles, each following its own independent orbit. By means of a spectroscope the velocity of any point of the ring has been determined and it has been found that particles on the inner edge of the ring revolve about the plane in approximately five hours, while those on the outer edge require about 14 hours for one revolution.

SYNOPSIS

Leila Seton, young and beautiful, and an expert on paintings, is commissioned to go over the collection of paintings in the home of the wealthy Kellers in New York, where a party is in progress. From her window she witnesses a man in another room strike a woman. Shortly after Mrs. Keller sends up word, asking her to join the party at dinner. Leila hastily dresses and goes down. She is seated between Mr. Deck, a critic, and Monty Mitchell, a noted lawyer. Introductions follow. There are Mr. Harriden, Miss Letty Van Alstyn, Mrs. Crane, Mrs. Watkins and Prince and Princess Rancini, guests. Leila finds she is taking the place of Nora Harriden. Dan Harriden leaves the table, and Mitchell explains he has gone up to see how his wife's headache is. He returns shortly. Deck, saying he must put in a call, leaves. Upon his return, he begs Leila to secretly take a message to Nora "to take no steps until I see you." Leila consents. Leila finds the Harriden rooms empty and so informs Deck. Coming out she passes Letty. Harriden asks Princess Rancini to run up and see his wife. The princess reports the absence of Nora. Search is fruitless. Harriden admits that he had a row, and believes she is spitefully hiding. Letty tells of seeing Leila come from the room. Leila accuses Harriden of having struck his wife. This Harriden denies. From the Harridens' window Leila sees what proves to be Nora's lifeless body. A ghastly head wound caused death. Dan says she was lying on her bed when he went to dinner, and when he ran up later the room was dark. Thinking she was asleep, he left without seeking her. Mrs. Keller comes upon a pool of blood in the closet. A diamond chain is missing.

When they went to examine the place where the body had been found, Monty Mitchell threw a coat about me and drew me out with him. Perhaps he wanted my observation, as he said; perhaps he was simply being kind to me, the outsider among those whispering groups.

The police had turned the headlights of their car on the shrubbery and every leaf stood out in brilliant detail. There was not a bit of blood to be found anywhere, nor did they find any object which could have made the wound in her head. The dense bushes had received her body and eased it to the ground. "She was dead before she got here," I heard the inspector say.

The ground had been so trampled by the men who had lifted out Mrs. Harriden's body that all footprints were indecipherable, and there were no marks to be found of any ladder.

"He must have had one, to get up there," Donahey muttered, squinting up at the smooth white stone facade, as the spotlight from a car played over its high austerity.

I heard Keller saying that the gardener reported that all ladders were safely locked in their proper places. "Awkward sort of thing to bring along with him," the inspector mused. "But he might have used it on the walls and then here."

"And lugged it away with him?" said Mitchell. "Somehow I don't see a sneak thief trying to lope along inconspicuously, with a twenty-foot ladder."

Slowly Donahey nodded, still studying the window. "Might have got in somewhere else and used the window for a getaway."

Mitchell debated that. "That's a high drop — he'd have made a heavy landing and smashed the bushes. There isn't a sign of injury to them except where Mrs. Harriden fell."

There is no use in going over those hours, moment by moment, those hours in which we sat waiting or milled around, eddying to each report. There were lonely hours for me, for now Monty Mitchell ceased to concern himself with me and went busily about with the police.

Very thoroughly they went over the place while Donahey interviewed each member of the domestic staff. He interviewed them separately, butlers, maids, cooks, laundresses, chauffeurs, the linen woman, the lodge-keeper, the boathouse-keeper, and not one of them had a suspicious thing to communicate. All their testimony was to the effect that it would be impossible for any one to enter or leave the house without being seen.

"Well, if it isn't an outside job it's an inside," Donahey retorted dispassionately. "Somebody got in here somehow."

I could see that Donahey was letting it stand for what it was worth at the present. Between the interviews there were constant reports from the men who had been sent out to check up on things and the sum total of those reports was that the lodge-keeper said there had been no attempts to enter and that there was no marks of footprints about the base of the walls or any ladder marks, or any signs of disturbance of the glass cemented on the top of the walls between the spikes. There were no footprints, either, in the sands where the side walls ended at the sea, and no indications of a boat having been beached. The tide had been going out since seven and the shore was utterly untouched except by water marks.

"Well, that's fine," said Donahey sarcastically. "No way into the grounds and no way into the house. Except by the front door."

CHAPTER IV

It was our turn then. A bizarre scene, I thought, to be taking place in that pale gray drawing room, the navy inspector in his dark uniform seated formally behind that incongruously fragile inlaid table, the strained group of men and women in evening dress, and the ring of policemen fringing the borders of the Aubusson carpet.

Donahey's notes and papers were spread out on the table before him and among them was a list of the guests the Kellers must have provided, that he consulted now carefully, checking us off one by one. There were ten of us present now, beside the Kellers, for Deck had reappeared from the seclusion he seemed to have been keeping, and Harriden himself had come down and stood, grim and expressionless, on the other side of that little table.

What Donahey wanted first was an account of the last time Mrs. Harriden had been seen alive. Every one had seen her at late afternooon cocktails, then Harriden reported that they had gone upstairs to dress, a little before seven-thirty, he thought, that later he had gone into his wife's room and she had said she had a headache and would not go down.

"About what time was that?"

Harriden considered. "About eight, I'd say. I know it was time to go down. I'd already dressed."

Not a word did he say about any other conversation between them, though earlier in the evening he had blurted out that there had been a row, and that he'd been afraid of what his wife might do, in hysteria or dramatics. Well, I did not blame him for holding that back. He was not called upon to offer up that secret bitterness to the public. . . . He must have felt sure that his friends would be careful not to repeat it; there was a solidarity that knit these people's interests together.

He went on, "The maid saw her at that time, too."

"Anson," mentioned Mrs. Keller, and Donahey's pencil moved.

"I rang for her just as I was leaving the room, and I told her Mrs. Harriden did not want to be disturbed or have any dinner brought up. No one was to come till she rang. I believe Mrs. Harriden told her this. No," he amended, "I remember the maid said Mrs. Harriden did not speak to her. Anson merely saw her."

"What was Mrs. Harriden doing then?"

"Lying on the bed." He added. "The room was darkened, and she said she wanted to go to sleep."

"What happened next?"

"I went down and told Mrs. Keller. She did not want her table unbalanced so she sent for some one in the house."

"During dinner," he stolidly continued, "I went up to see how Mrs. Harriden was. The room was still dark, and I closed the door without speaking, believing her asleep."

"She was still on the bed—?"

Harriden hesitated. "I thought she was—I took it for granted that she was. I can not swear to it since the room was dark."

"At what time would you place your visit?"

"Oh, sometime during dinner," he jerked out, with his first betrayal of impatience at the ordeal. "Early in the meal, I think, for there was time for some one else to leave the table for quite an interval after I returned."

Donahey made a quick note of that.

"Then what happened?"

"Nothing. We finished dinner. Afterwards, before they began on bridge I asked the Princess Rancini to run up and see how my wife was. It was her visit that discovered Mrs. Harriden's absence from the room—though we have been told that some one else had already discovered it, without mentioning it."

I Closed the Door Without Speaking.

"Who was that?"

Harriden's head jerked towards me. "I think the name is Seton."

My heart began to race as Donahey looked toward me; he could not fail to be struck, I thought, by something purposefully slighting, almost contemptuous, in Harriden's reference, but, though his pencil made a quick, side notation, he did not question me then.

After a moment, Harriden continued, very deliberately, "I sent the princess because I thought Mrs. Harriden might want a little attention from another woman—women always know what to do for a headache. The princess came down and told me she was not in her room."

I knew then why he had chosen to give his testimony before all of us, refusing privacy. He wanted the Princess Rancini to hear what he had to say and be guided by it.

"And that is all you can tell us, Mr. Harriden?"

"That is all I know."

"What was your surmise when she was first missing?"

"I didn't have any. Thought she might be walking off a headache. We went out to look."

"You didn't see any reason to summon the police — didn't fear she had been kidnaped?"

Harriden growled, "No."

"You've no knowledge of any threatening letters she may have received, or any previous suspicious circumstances?"

Harriden grunted a negative.

"Now what time was it when the Princess went to Mrs. Harriden's room?"

"Just after dinner."

"And what time was that?"

"Couldn't say."

"Oh, a little after nine-thirty," Mr. Keller suggested.

"After nine thirty," he repeated. "And the deceased was last seen alive at eight o'clock—by Mr. Harriden and the maid Anson—possibly alive at eight forty-five. . . . Now one thing more, Harriden. How was the window when you left the room at eight o'clock? Was it open?"

"Couldn't say," Harriden told him. "Probably closed or I'd have felt a draft."

"And when you came up from dinner?"

"Didn't notice any cold air."

"It was the maid who found the window open, Mr. Donahey," Mrs. Keller suddenly interjected, as if she could bear no more of this tedious verifying of what we were all by now familiar with, but Donahey was not to be hurried.

"I'm coming to the maid.. . . First I'd like to hear what the Princess Rancini has to say about the room." He turned directly to the princess who was seated now a little away from the table. "Was the window open when you went in after dinner?"

"I think not," said the princess. "I noticed nothing unusual. The room was simply ready for the night."

"Where's this Miss Seton that was up in the room before you?"

"I'm Miss Seton," I said, my heart knocking.

"When did you go up to the room?"

I told him, "Just after dinner. Just before the Princess Rancini went."

"How did you happen to go? Friend of Mrs. Harriden's?"

"I had never met her," I answered. "I am a stranger here," and I went on to tell him why I had come and what my work was.

"How'd you happen to go up?" he asked me.

There was no help for it; I had to go on with the story I had told them before. Aside from my feeling of not betraying Deck—and that was strangely strong — I knew that he would hear my first story, sooner or later, and round upon me for untruth. I said, very slowly, "I went, because I thought I knew what had happened. I thought Mrs. Harriden had a hurt check she wanted to hide and that I could help her cover it up. In my work I had pigments and stains with me."

"How did you know she had a hurt cheek?"

"Because, from my window, before dressing for dinner, I saw some man in her room slap her. I can't be sure it was she," I stumbled on, "but it was in her room, the first big window at the north, on the front of the house, and I saw the figures of a man and a woman there, against the light."

"You mean you saw a man hit her?"

Harriden tried to intervene. "Look here, inspector—" but Donahey waved him away, his eyes steadily on me.

"He didn't exactly hit her," I said. "He just slapped her. Then she went away from the window, and he seemed to follow and then one of them came and pulled the curtains across. Anyway I couldn't see any more."

"And what time was that?"

"Some time before dinner. About seven-thirty—a little after."

"Who was the man?"

"I don't know."

"You know what he looked like, don't you? Big or little, tall or short? You say you saw him."

"I saw the outline of a man," was all I could tell him. "There wasn't anything to compare him with until she came into sight and then I was so startled by what he did that I wasn't really attending to what he looked like."

"Well, was he taller than she was or shorter?"

"Why, I'd say taller, but I couldn't be sure," I stammered.

"Oh, you couldn't be sure!" His tone was distinctly ironical. "Seems to me, young lady," he commented, "you haven't got a very good detecting eye."

"A man might be a very good detector of counterfeit notes," I retorted, heartened by my anger at him, "and not be able to describe people glimpsed at a window—in silhouette. They were just shadows against the light."

"H'm. How about this, Mr. Harriden?"

Harriden's look turned towards me, and I could feel the heavy hatred in it, like a weight upon me. I did not blame him.

"Oh, it's a lie," he said contemptuously. "I think this girl is a publicity seeker—or worse."

Donahey was reshuffling his notes. "You say you and your wife went to your rooms a little before seven thirty?"

"Thereabouts. She went up before I did."

"And you went directly to your room?"

"That's it."

"When did you go to your wife's room?"

"I told you. When I was dressed. To see if she was ready."

"And you didn't hear anybody in the room before that?"

"I did not," said Harriden harshly.

Donahey consulted a rough drawing he had already made of the arrangement of the rooms. "Door shut between your rooms?"

Harriden appeared to reflect. "It was," he said firmly.

"And your dressing-room and bath were at the north end of her's, I see. Couldn't you have been there—and so not heard anything?"

"I was all over the place, dressing," said Harriden very positively, "and there wasn't anything to hear."

"We—ell," said the inspector, considering, with an attempt at a soothing inflection, "we have to look into it, anyhow, you know."

"You'd better spend your time," exploded Harriden, "in asking Alan Deck what he was doing when he left the dinner-table after I did. The maid saw him outside Mrs. Harriden's room."

"All right," said Donahey. "Where's Mr. Deck?" Alan Deck's tall figure came forward. "When did you go upstairs, Mr. Deck?"

Alan Deck answered slowly, "About nine o'clock or a little before, I'd say. I went to put in a call to my paper. I was outside Mrs. Harriden's door," went on Deck, in a drawling, almost amused voice, "because I went past to the picture gallery on the third floor after a handkerchief I'd left there before dinner."

"And Mrs. Harriden's door was closed?"

"I think so. All the doors along the hall were closed, I'm sure."

"And you didn't go into the room?"

"Mrs. Harriden's room?" said Deck with that same half-amusement which grated so on my tense nerves. "No, Mr. Inspector, I did not go into any room but my own. And the gallery."

"All right. Now let's have in the maid," said the inspector. "She must have gone into the room, since it was all fixed up for the night."

They didn't have to wait long for Anson. In she soon came, the pretty, rosy-cheeked girl I had seen before. Donahey asked her a few preliminary questions, and she repeated what she had already told of her coming to the door at eight o'clock and Mr. Harriden's telling her not to disturb Mrs. Harriden, and of what the room had been like when she came to arrange it later. It was dark, she said, and the bed mussed, as if some one had been on it without taking off the covers, a comforter was disarranged and the window was wide open. She had closed and locked it.

"Any signs of a struggle?" Donahey wanted to know and Anson looked quite shocked. "Oh, no," she said primly.

She could not fix the time of her entry very positively but the room was her last, and she thought it was just before the end of dinner. "There hadn't been any noise yet in the hall," she said innocently.

Then Harriden barked out a sudden question at her. "What made you go in after I'd told you to keep out?"

Anson looked straight ahead, and there were hints of a struggle within her. "Well, it was some time after," she said uncertainly, "and then, seeing the gentleman outside the door I thought he might have been in, and so she was awake, and it would be all right for me—"

"What gentleman did you see?" Donahey slid in very quietly, though we already knew.

As if against her will, her round, defensive eyes slid about and indicated Alan Deck. "Mr. Deck, it was," she said reluctantly.

"Passing—on my way from the gallery," said Deck briefly.

Donahey was picking up a fresh sheet of paper. "That's all—for now," he said, dismissing her with a curt nod. "There's this other thing I want to clear up—that scene at the window before dinner."

"Oh, my God!" said Harriden with savage bitterness.

"I know, I know." Donahey's voice was professionally placatory for an instant. "You think the girl's making it up, but we got to look into it, just the same. . . . She says she saw a man in there about seven-thirty. Now where were all you gentlemen about seven-thirty?"

"The Prince Rancini was in his apartment," said the princess haughtily.

"So was my husband," said Mrs. Watkins.

"Can't the men speak for themselves?" asked Donahey with the first touch of humor I'd seen in him.

Longest City in World

One distinction about Honolulu is that governmentally it is the longest city in the world. The city and the county of Honolulu are conterminous, both embracing the 40-mile-long island of Oahu. By legislative act Oahu, for administrative purposes, was made to reach out to Midway island, 1,300 miles to the northwest, and to Palmyra island, 960 miles to the south. If its main street extended the full length of the city, it would be 2,260 miles long.

The teacher at a London school noticed during the Scripture lesson that a small boy at the bottom of the class seemed to be finding the questions too difficult.

"Please, miss," answered Jimmy, after a moment's thought, "it's what the 'erald angels sings."

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

LIVING TRIUMPHANTLY

What is the "triumphant life"—is it being out of debt, with sufficient income and to be able to say "o. k." to the world? May be some think it to be possessor of great wealth, a life of leisure with plenty of riches and a "good time." Or is it enjoying good health and holding a job with contentment and thankful to be able to work? The average person may have the question settled in his own mind whether his opinion is right or wrong; but nevertheless: What is the triumphant life?

Living triumphantly must mean not only a life of happiness but that of freedom from care and worry—the bane of most all living. Of course this would be a life impossible, especially in a world "taxed to death" and a hundred and one other things which must be considered. There are many ways to look at this subject, but there is only one real solution. One thing is very positive; if living triumphantly is happiness and contentment, it certainly cannot mean business conditions on market reports; however, there are evidences today that the dollar sign is the pole star of a great section of humanity. It is easy to believe that money is the chief end of many a man.

CALIFORNIA'S LEGISLATURE

The State Legislature has had its portion of knotty financial problems, sufficient and troublesome enough to cause many wakeful hours from peaceful slumber. This was a very reluctant special session dealing mostly with that hard subject of relief. It is a deplorable fact that relief attention has forced the taxpayer into heavier taxes and the end is not in sight. We cannot see suffering go on, even facing bankruptcy; but it must be admitted that in times past economy could have been exercised with great benefit to both the taxpayer and relief.

Without the knowledge or consent of the taxpayers, this same law-making body has run the state government more than $62,000,000 into the hole! in addition to $160,000,000 bona fide bonded indebtedness, in the past four years. And before the end of the present biennium this debt will exceed $80,000,000. The technicality under which the politicians have been able to do this, is that they do not actually borrow the money. They merely spend more than they have, and "owe" what they can't pay.

Governor Merriam has announced that if the people reject the income and sales taxes, state officials will beforced to levy an ad valorem tax on all property in order to run the state government. What he really means is that this will have to be done to get money enough to support the vast army of unnecessary office holders, and to pay for the innumerable unnecessary and extravagant activities which the state now carries on. It looks as if the long delayed show-down between the taxpayers and the politicians is at hand, for if an ad valorem tax is established, it will only mean another referendum and after that perhaps the politicians will have to give some thought to the question of whether the state's financial problem cannot be solved by less spending.

At the rate the state is now going it will not be long before the outstanding and unpaid warrents will be greater than the state's entire yearly income, and that will be a sad situation for our beloved state of California.—And there is talk of another special session in July, so that we may go on spending.

The public library is a constant companion and educator of the masses. We little realize how often we seek information to guide our intelligence. Good literature is a perpetual stimulant to the mind, the same as exercise is to the body. Ninety-eight per cent of the residents of California have public library service available to them through the library systems which operate in 46 of the 53 counties, and in 146 municipalities. State and county co-operation is doing marvelous work through the various library boards. Back of this service is a history of public interest in libraries that began very early in California. The first Legislature, meeting in 1850, passed a bill which established the State Library, also providing for its support. But this organization was restricted by law to reference work, and it was not until the beginning of the present century that a wide-spread development of the public library occured in California. The American Library association in its recent national convention decided to provide library service for the 45,000,000 people now without it. To improve the service to some 40,000,000 people living in areas where libraries are now inadequate. To make the library a significant agency for adult education, and to increase the resources of the American libraries.

Anyone looking for trouble never fails to find it. There are more of this class than those looking for peace, it would seem from daily reports in the newspapers. Most people so unfortunate must have a chronic ailment. All that is required of any man to get along in the world with neighbor or in business, is that he be true to himself, loyal to his obligations, great hearted and kind in his relations with his daily contact with people. In a world made up with laughter and tears, prosperity and adversity, success and failure, joy and sorrow, sunshine and shadow, one can make his choice easily if he seems so disposed. At a time when all sorts of emergency laws are being enacted with a view to giving "security", why not try law founded upon the golden rule?

Scientific research is interesting in this age, more than any other generation of the past. The airplane has revealed that there are 25,000 miles around the earth by air and that nearly 60 per cent of the surface is water. The average elevation of land above the sea level is 1300 feet. The average depth of ocean below sea level is 42,000 feet, of considerably over two miles. The United States has 5000 miles of shoreline, 3700 miles of navigable lakes and 28 states are accessible to ocean vessels. Here is also a worthy bit of information. The boundary line between the United States and Canada is the longest boundary line in the world that is not guarded by a single fort and soldier! Indeed, the world has been finding out a lot about itself within the past quarter of a century.

There is a very definite psychology in leading a man to the altar in the month of June .... June just precedes the hot summer months and is therefore a most propitious time to sell HIM on the idea of an * electric refrigerator.

Of course, this all sounds sort of brutal but after all food is a necessity much appreciated by the male of the species .... and proper refrigeration is what makes that food not only delicious but also economical.

So what's wrong with making him promise to love, honor and buy you an electric refrigerator

Veterans too, seem to have recognized this fact, because when Uncle Sam inquired, a large proportion of them said they planned to invest a part of their Bonus for Electric Refrigeration in their homes

DREAMS OF ACCORDIONIST AND BARITONE COME TRUE

A young star of community opera, son of a city fireman, and an accordionist whose fingers learned to fly in keeping up with those of a talented older cousin, today are well on their way toward the realization of their fondest dreams.

Ernest Gloe

Frank Tavaglione

Frank Tavaglione, the community opera favorite whose home is in Riverside, and Ernest Gloe, the accordionist, who lives in San Francisco, have been declared winners in the first semi-finals recently concluded in the state-wide tournament conducted by the "California's Hour" radio program.

They are the two survivors, as chosen by votes of California listeners, from among eight semi-finalists, who previously had won preliminary contests which established them as the representative artists from their own communities.

Tavaglione and Gloe will now await the finals which will be held several months from now and in which the winners of the two more semi-final broadcasts will also be entered.

Both winners are twenty years old, and each has hopes of a musical career. Tavaglione is a favorite of his home community, having sung in various civic and school productions. Gloe began playing the accordion when he was twelve, in friendly rivalry with an older relative also an accordionist.

To arrive where they are now in the state-wide tournament, Tavaglione and Gloe have won through these successive steps:

First they had an audition, among scores of others in their own communities. From among all the applicants heard, each was selected as one of ten, to be heard in public audition. A committee of their fellow citizens chose six of the ten to appear on the Columbia-Don Lee program, which is broadcast every Monday evening from 9 to 10.

People all over the State, in voting their choices from among the six on the program, selected Tavaglione on the Riverside broadcast and Gloe on the San Francisco program, for which each of the two won $50 in cash and a return trip to Los Angeles for the semi-finals.

Then, for winning in the latter event, each was awarded $100 in cash, and receives a chance to make still a third trip to Los Angeles to compete for the grand prize of $500. Besides the $100, they received a week's engagement at the Cocoanut Grove at Los Angeles' Ambassador Hotel.

Thus the final winner, when the series is completed, will have made three trips to Los Angeles, with traveling and other expenses paid, and will have been awarded a total of $650 in cash besides.

Tavaglione sang the Credo from "Othello", and Gloe played "Flight of the Bumble Bee".

Featured stars of "California's Hour" are Jane Froman, singer, and Conrad Nagel, noted actor who is master of ceremonies.

BAPTIST CHURCH SERVICES

Rev. W. S. Dunn will be the speaker in the morning hour of worship at 11 o'clock. His sermon subject will be "Facing The Inevitable."

The B.Y.P. societies will meet in the schoolroom at 6:30 p. m. These meetings are open to all the young people of the community.

There will be a service of song at 7:30 p. m. at which time the pastor will speak on the subject "Seeking Life."

You are cordially invited to the services of this church.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

Touching on the question of suicide, accidental death, etc., La Fayette Plummer, who will speak on "What Death Really Is" at Theosophical headquarters, Sunday, June 21, will give the Theosophical philosophy which states that the post-mortem condition of those dying by self-murder is one of continued horror and a repeated dwelling on the thoughts that motivated the act. Those that die by accident, however, not self-inflicted, pass through this period without feeling of any kind; it is a complete blank. This condition lasts until the normal life of the person would have endured, then the usual process of post-mortem dissolution takes place. Plummer is giving the third of the series of talks on this subject. At the close of his address the audience is invited to share in the discussion.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Is the Universe, including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" This is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The Golden Text is from the Proverbs: "The Lord by wisdom hath founded the earth; by understanding hath he established the heavens."

Among the Bible citations in the Lesson-Sermon are these verses from the Gospel of John: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. . . . All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made. In him was life; and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not."

A correlative passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, states: "Divine Science, the Word of God, saith to the darkness upon the face of error, 'God is All-in-all,' and the light of ever-present Love illumines the universe. Hence the eternal wonder,—that infinite space is peopled with God's ideas, reflecting Him in countless spiritual forms."

AMERICANA

By Ellsworth Floyd Whalen

It is with a great deal of pleasure that I am going to resume writing my Americana column here in San Diego. After a rather long absence from my southern host of readers, I am sure that our re-acquaintance thru this column will be a pleasant one. As I stated in my last Americana column, all criticism from articles appearing under this caption should be applied to me directly, as this column does not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of this newspaper.

There is little news of an event of great importance that is taking place in Washington, D. C. these days. Few Americans know that a great effort is being made to form an American League of Nations for the twenty-one nations of the American Hemisphere. Th plan for bettering international relations among the American republics to the south of our boundary line is not an old one. Efforts and treaties have been formulated to create a feeling of constructive good-will among the Latin-American nations without success. The new plan should be more of a success than past ventures as the presidents of the various Latin-American nations are supporting the international project and their interest is a sincere one.

From time to time, this writer will give his followers the very latest developments made towards this important international project.

There are more ways than one for American colleges to attain publicity. The usual practice along college publicity lines, is to buy up all the promising football players the institution can possibly afford financially. However; another, and a more inexpensive way of gaining publicity for the colleges, is to confer degrees of an honorary nature on famous men in the public eye and fancy. A typical example is the honorary degree of doctor of engineering given to Henry Ford by the Michigan State College at its commencement exercises which were held on June 15th. Such degrees are conferred often, and in many cases, too often for the institution's prestige that bequeaths them.

* * * * * * *

It has often been expressed, and it is often true, that the real sentiments of the American people are best brought out in the editorials that appear in the small weekly newspapers thruout the United States. Free from financial domination by the "higher-ups", the small newspaper is an example of typical American rugged individualism at its best. It is no secret that large advertising firms often dictate the editorial policies of the daily press; capitalism thus overshadows many supposed patriotic editorials for the public welfare.

Now that our Veterans finally received their just compensation in the form of a bonus, how are they going to spend it? The later question seems to be worrying many merchants, especially those merchants who want the Veteran to blow in his whole bonus at their store. Those who were fortunate to receive this bonus money should think before they spend. Every slicker in the country has his idea on the best method of cheating some deserving Veteran out of his little nest egg. Beware of these sudden friends and think of your neighborhood merchant who has served you faithfully when you are ready to spend your money on some constructive enterprise.

Over two years have been spent in the development of the autogiro. Manufacturing has finally started once more on these novel wingless machines which wend their way thru the air with long rotor blades. The United States Department of Commerce is sponsoring the development and construction of an autogiro that can be used on land as well as flight trips. Substantial progress has been made and the announcement of this new type autogiro to the public is awaited with interest. Mr. Vidal of the Air Commerce Bureau is to be congratulated for his efforts to stimulate progress in air travel improvements.

Union Title Company Boosts Ocean Beach

The Union Title Co. of San Diego in its Sunday advertisement in one of the city dailies gives Ocean Beach some very favorable publicity as follows:

OCEAN BEACH

"Avenues leading to Ocean Beach are favored with conditions that permit quick transportation. The tide level boulevards are almost void of any cross traffic. It is seven miles from Fifth and Broadway over these wide avenues. Ocean Beach and Sunset Cliffs represent an area of three square miles endowed with ideal homeland and shoreline properties which rise gradually from the ocean front to that exceptional view property along the crest of Point Loma. Its real advancement began only a few years ago when all its streets were paved and sidewalked. The planting of ornamental trees along its avenues is a recognized improvement. Ocean Beach has come into its own.

"A mile of sandy beach with ideal bathing qualification and two miles of rocky shore line offers a rare combination. West Point Loma Boulevard is to be oiled and this will add to the lure of that section.

"Rental properties have become scarce. An extended building program is now being furthered. Property prices are exceptionally low and tax conditions in Ocean Beach favor investments."

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY DONATES $5 TO CAMPERSHIP

As part of its child welfare program, the American Legion auxiliary, unit 433 of Ocean Beach, have donated $5.00 to the "campership fund" of the Point Loma Coordinating council.

Mrs. Naomi Dick, newly elected president of the American Legion auxiliary of Ocean Beach, is the delegate of that organization to the Point Loma Coordinating council.

Child welfare is only one of the activities in the Legion program that should be of interest to this community and in which Ocean Beach should take an active part. Other activities are community service, Americanism, and rehabilitation.

The proceeds from card parties given jointly by the American Legion post 433 and its auxiliary at their headquarters, 1957 Abbott street, on the third Thursday of each month, are added to the funds set aside in the budgets of the post and auxiliary to carry on the activities listed above, which determines the extent to which this worthy program is followed out in Ocean Beach.

Only the Fence

A stranger addressed the farmer's boy across the fence.

"Young man, your corn looks kind o' yellow."

"Yes, that's the kind we planted."

"Don't look as if you would get more than half a crop."

"Don't expect to. The landlord gets the other half."

Then, after a pause, the man said: "Boy, there isn't much difference between you and a fool."

"No," replied the boy, "only the fence."—Hoard's Dairyman.

THIS IS GOOD-BY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THIS is good-by, and for a long, long while,
Not for an hour, not only for a day.
Yet I can laugh, and even you can smile,
Though you were always wiser, in a way.
And so farewell, and here's the casual kiss
Men give so often, even women do;
Yet something ever after we shall miss,
Miss till such things as hours and days are through.

This is good-by, and for a long, long time,
Not for a week, not for a month, or year.
Not soon my eager feet the stair shall climb,
Though you may wait, may wait in vain to hear.
Or I may come, may come and may not find,
Yet with a smile we wave, a smile we go.
At ev'ry parting heaven is always kind;
This is good-by—thank God we do not know.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

BILLY MINK WARNS BOBBY COON

FOR a long time Billy Mink and Bobby Coon sat gossiping on the edge of the Laughing Brook. Then Bobby, having finished what he had to eat, decided that he would go down the Laughing Brook to see what he could find. There's nothing Bobby Coon enjoys more than wandering along the Laughing Brook, watching for a little fish to carelessly come within reach, or just simply playing in the water. Bobby has almost as much curiosity as has Peter Rabbit. He simply has to examine everything which appears strange. A shiny pebble in the water or a shell will catch his eyes and he will stop to play with it.

"I Wonder How This Little Fence Happens To Be Here."

Billy Mink watched Bobby start along down the Laughing Brook. "I wonder what he'll do when he comes to that little fence," thought Billy. So, to find out what Bobby would do, he followed him. When Bobby came to the little fence he sat down and stared at it in the funniest way. Then he began to talk to himself. "That's a funny thing," said he. "I wonder how that little fence happens to be here. I've never seen it before. I wonder what it's for. Nobody had any business to build a fence like that. The only way I can get around it is to climb way up that bank, and I don't want to do that." You know Bobby is rather lazy.

So, he sat and looked at the fence, which was made of sticks stuck down in the ground, and the more he looked the more determined he became that he wouldn't be stopped and that he wouldn't climb that bank. Of course it didn't take him long to discover that right in the middle of that fence was an opening, a sort of gateway. But it was a very narrow opening. You see, it had been made just wide enough for Billy Mink, and Bobby Coon is a great deal bigger than Billy Mink.

Bobby went a little nearer and once more sat down, his head cocked on one side as he studied that little opening. "It's too narrow for me, but if I try hard enough perhaps I can push those sticks aside and make it wider. That would be easier than climbing that steep bank," he said.

So Bobby walked a few steps nearer and again sat down. Somehow, he had an uncomfortable feeling that something was wrong. He didn't know why he had that feeling, but he had it. Now, whenever one of the little people of the Green Forest has that feeling he becomes very cautious. Bobby was tempted to try at once to push his way through that little opening, but because of that feeling that something was wrong he hesitated. Then very carefully he examined that little fence from the bottom of the steep bank clear to the edge of the water. He smelled of each separate stick of that fence, but he could smell nothing suspicious. Those were just plain old sticks and nothing else. Finally, he made up his mind that there couldn't be anything really wrong in at least trying to go through that little opening. He reached forward with one foot to place it right in the middle of that opening.

"Stop!" cried Billy Mink.

TRY THIS TRICK

COIN ON FOREHEAD

THIS is one of those puzzling little stunts that appear to be really magical when presented in off-hand fashion.

Borrowing a small coin, the magician sets it against the center of his forehead. The coin apparently becomes magnetized, for it adheres there.

Even though the performer tilts his head forward and shakes it from side to side, the coin does not fall. The magician finally removes the coin and gives it back to its owner.

It all depends upon the way you put the coin in place. Set it against your forehead and push the coin upward. This creates suction and the coin will stick firmly after you take your hand from it.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

SOME TIMELY HINTS

WE ARE beginning to realize that "just a cold" is not always a simple thing. Many of the fatal illnesses are begun by a cold that has not been cared for intelligently or has been ignored.

During the spring when unseasonable weather or warm days cause carelessness, colds are most prevalent. A cold may, even after what seems a good recovery, leave the body weakened and thus open to serious complications and after effects. Staying in bed is one of the best remedies, drinking plenty of water and using citrus fruits freely. Nothing has yet been found that is better than the old remedy of hot lemonade, good warm cover, plenty of fresh air and a comfortable bed.

The following are a few recipes for various lemonades:

Hot Lemonade.

Take three tablespoons of lemon juice, three-fourths of a cupful of boiling water and honey to sweeten. This makes, with cold water and ice, the standard plain lemonade. This serves one; adding various spices and flavors gives a different lemonade.

One may slice the lemon, cover with boiling water, let stand ten minutes well covered, strain and serve sweetened to taste. This gives the flavor of the peel which is well liked.

Spiced Hot Lemonade.

Cut a lemon in two and cut a slice from each half. Extract the juice from the halves. Pour boiling water over the lemon slices, using one cup, add one-eighth teaspoon of ground cloves, one teaspoon of minced crystallized ginger and two cherries cut into halves. Add honey or sugar to sweeten.

Hot Grape Ade.

Combine the juice of one lemon with two tablespoons of grape juice, one cup of boiling water and sugar to taste.

Menus should be planned to keep the body in good health, full of pep and energy. Now with the markets full of the fresh fruits and vegetables they should be used very freely to avoid illnesses.

Visitors Welcome

Mrs. Gertie Secord, old time resident of the beach section on Pescadero avenue until three and one-half years ago, is stopping at the Newport hotel. Mrs. Secord during her absence has been making her home in Arkansas City, Kan., with a son and daughter-in-law, the latter being in ill health for several years and passed away during the spring season. Mrs. Secord has many warm friends here who are very glad to greet her again.

KIWANIANS LEARN ABOUT NATURAL GAS DISTRIBUTION

Dr. I. W. Parks presided at Kiwanis luncheon Wednesday with Jack Massey as chairman of the day's program.

Ralph Phillips of the San Diego Consolidated Gas & Electric Co. exhibited a reel of descriptive moving pictures showing formation of gas and oil producing areas, distribution systems and the many uses to which natural gas has been put in furnishing us with many comforts and conveniences in the home, factory and office.

The speaker said that the natural gas we use at this point comes mostly from the Kettleman Hills section of central California though the wells and lines are all pretty well interconnected so that we might get from a shorter distance in case of necessity.

The program was instructive with a number of questions being answered by the speaker.
